An article in the Springfield (Mo.) Republican tells of the organization of an art society in that city, by Miss Marian Morrow, supervisor of drawing in the public schools of Springfield. Miss Morrow is a Topeka girl, the daughter of Mrs. C. S. Morrow. A colony of artists from Chicago has spent some time in the Ozark mountains this fall, painting. They have been trying to transfer to canvas some of the beauties of the Ozark region in the autumn season, when the heavily wooded hills are a blaze of color in autumn tints. The colony of artists has been living at Hollister, and it was there that Miss Morrow met them, and invited them to Springfield to give an exhibit of their paintings. The society has been organized, called the Ozark Painters, having as its president the distinguished artist, Rudolph S. Ingerle of Chicago. Carl B. Kraft of Chicago is vice president, and Frank B. Nuderscher of St. Louis is secretary.

have it in the husband's name. It is simply time-honored custom to have the property in the husband's name. Mrs. C. J. Evans asked Judge MacFarland if, in case he, as a lawyer, was consulted by a woman who desired to change her name, he would advise her to insist on the change. He replied that his answer would depend on the circumstances. The husband in the implied distrust of the wife, Mrs. Evans continued that if the present arrangement was changed, it would be better to have the arrangement changed, was it not his duty to advise such a change?

The discussion then concluded the Judge's remarks was animated and touched a subject of apparent close interest to the women. They have been thinking about their property interests, and they were ready to talk it over with an authority.
